

CAMPAIGN NAME : ID THEFT PROGRAM

E-COMMERCE PLATFORM: AMAZON

INTRODUCTION

Agent: Thank you for calling the Amazon Fraud Control Department, my name is PHONE NAME. How can I help you?

CUSTOMER: I have received a message showing that your account is locked due to suspicious activities and your card along with your banking credentials may be at risk.*

Agent: I am sorry for any inconvenience this has caused you. Before we start, what is your first and last name and the email address linked to your Amazon account? (GET THE PHONE NUMBER FROM THE DIALER)

CUSTOMER: Provides his name and email.*

Agent: Thank you for the information. And your phone number is (PROVIDE THE PHONE NUMBER FROM THE DIALER)

CUSTOMER: Yes*

Agent: In case we get disconnected, do you have a landline number that I can call back?

CUSTOMER: Yes or No (If yes, ask for the landline number)*

Agent: Thank you! As part of the verification process, when is your DOB?

CUSTOMER: Date of birth*

If customer refuses to give DOB - I asked for your birth date to confirm that I'm speaking with someone of legal age and authorized to access the Amazon account.

Agent: And your address?

CUSTOMER: Address (confirm any apt or unit numbers)*

Agent: Thank you, I am now reviewing your account. While checking, let me ask you a few questions. Apart from you is there anyone else who may have had the access to your account? Maybe your spouse?

CUSTOMER: Could be yes or no (confirm the marital status)

If customer's response is unclear – this is just part of the verification process, can you confirm your marital status?

If customer wants to know why you need to confirm the marital status – just for us to confirm if there is someone else who may have had the access to your account.

Agent: Have you recently travelled in the past months?

CUSTOMER: Yes or No (If yes, ask for the location?)

Agent: While reviewing your account, I noticed login attempts from multiple locations, including Florida, California, Arizona, and New York, aside from your location in CUSTOMER STATE. Do you recognize these login attempts?

CUSTOMER: NO

Agent: Since you do not recognize these login attempts, your account may have been compromised that is why you received the error message. Based on our review, your account is at risk and will be temporarily suspended while the investigation is ongoing.

But don't worry, I'll assist you in creating an investigative report which I will submit to FTC.

I will guide you through the process as long as we work together.

Customer: Ok

Agent: During our review, we identified two Amazon accounts registered under your name — one Business account and one Personal account. Could you please confirm whether these accounts belong to you or if you recognize them?

Customer: I have a personal account. (Or business account)

Agent: The reason why I am confirming is because I can see that there is an additional business account that was created under your name. Did you set up another business account?

Customer: NO

Agent: I want to be very honest with you if we don't get this resolved as soon as possible the situation can escalate very quickly. Especially that I can see orders and charges placed under your identity in this business account. I need you to understand the severity of the situation as this could potentially lead to further unauthorized charges and greater compromise of your identity. Now, I need you to answer every question accurately and immediately, because every detail determines the next step in protecting your information.

Customer: (wait for customer response)

I will give you the orders and charges so please confirm if you authorized any of these.

1 iPhone 17 $1199 full payment BOA card ending 0341 shipped to 1640 Chestnut Ave, Winter Park, FL 32789 shipped last...(check the date on the template)

1 Macbook $1399 full payment JPMC card ending 0069 shipped to 2790 West 5th Street, Brooklyn, NY 11224 shipped last.....(check the date on the template)

Customer: No

Agent: These orders and bank accounts are not associated with you, correct?

Customer: Yes

I don't see any charges in my card for the orders you just mentioned - I want to reassure you that your bank information was not used for these orders. The individuals who accessed your account used a different card. It's possible that the card they used may also have been stolen, which can be stressful to think about. Because the orders were placed under your name, it's important that we address this as soon as possible, so you're protected.

Agent: Are you using a debit or credit card with Amazon?

Customer: Yes (confirm if it is a debit or savings account)

If customer asks why you're asking for their method of payment with Amazon – We just wanted to ensure that your card is not compromised as well. This is a way for us to protect your payment information with us.

Agent: Is your card linked to your checking or savings account?

Customer: Yes

If customer asks why you need to know if it is linked to a checking or savings account - I get where you are coming from the only reason I had to ask is because I would like to make sure that your banking information is not yet compromised. This is to protect you from further damage.

Agent: With which bank?

Customer: (will disclose bank name)

Agent: At this point, this is no longer a simple security concern. Since this clearly qualifies as a potential fraud and identity theft case, I am obligated by law to create an official investigative report and escalate this to the FTC so they can take over and provide the resolution of this matter at the federal level.

Customer: Ok

Agent: What device do you normally use when trying to access your Amazon account?

Customer: Laptop/Cellphone/Ipad

Agent: Have you ever connected your device to a public wifi network? (coffee shops, airport etc)

Customer: (response could be yes or no)

Agent: Does your vehicle have a wifi connection that you use?

Customer: (response could be yes or no)

Agent: Security issues like this can occur if a device is connected to public Wi-Fi networks, such as at airports, hospitals, coffee shops, or other public places. They can also happen if sensitive information is shared through phishing emails or unsafe downloads.

Customer: Ok

Agent: The alarming part is that it is even possible that the bank accounts used in paying the unauthorized orders under your name are also stolen. If the legitimate owners of those bank accounts file a complaint you will be held responsible. And we don't want that to happen.

For your protection, we will immediately transfer this call to FTC, who are authorized to handle such matters directly. They will assist you in resolving the case and prevent any further misuse of your personal or financial information. Are we clear so far?

Customer: Ok

Agent: Before we proceed with submitting an investigative report, I will conduct a full security check to ensure that your personal information and credit status have not been affected. This is not a credit check; this is solely intended to run a full security check under your name.

Agent: After reviewing your account, your credit does not appear to be affected, but I do see bank accounts opened under your name. One is associated with Truist Financial, another savings account showed up with US Bank, there's also one with Citibank. Did you set up any bank accounts with these banks?

Customer: NO

This may indicate broader identity misuse, so it's important that we act quickly. The sooner we document and escalate this, the better we can protect your information and prevent further issues.

I need you to speak with an officer from FTC to help you clear your name from these fraudulent activities and identity theft. At this point, I need you to write down all the information you need before I connect you to the officer.

- GIVE YOUR PHONE NAME
- CASE ID NUMBER
- UNAUTHORIZED ORDERS (product, amount, bank used, state and zip code)
- Names of all banks where accounts have been created under their name

Why do I need to write these information? Can't you just send it to my email? - These information I am asking for you to write down will be needed by the Federal Trade Commission once you get to speak with them. I will connect you to them after I have completed the investigative report from my end. Please be advised that the Federal Trade Commission is the department who will resolve this fraud and identity theft issue under your name.

Agent: Thank you! Just a quick recap of everything we have discussed. Your Amazon account was compromised and hacked. A business account was created under your name without your approval and orders are placed and shipped to different addresses with bank accounts that you are not familiar with. Bank accounts were also established without your authorization. THIS IS FRAUDULENT AND A CLEAR CASE OF IDENTITY THEFT. Are we on the same page?

Customer: (must be a positive response)

Agent: Please make sure to cooperate with the FTC officer so this will be resolved immediately. Okay?

Customer: (must be a positive response)

Do you have any questions? (address additional questions)

I will now escalate and transfer this case.

Please remain on the line while I connect you over.

IF CUSTOMER HAS NO MORE QUESTIONS PROCEED WITH TRANSFER
